Hello everyone,

So here we come to an end of our Kshitj Summer Web Training Workshop 2020. First, don't judge yourself on the marks that were given to you, marks were given in order to make you push your limits, to do something better, to do something that was different. If you had 50 or so marks in the assignment that just mean you need to put more time in the job rather than thinking you are not good enough to do the job. Again, imperfections are an integral part of human. What we did was just something like what a high school does, introduced you to various basic aspects of web development and made you reach a level where you can choose in which part, you have to pursue your interest. Some people might like designing and related stuff they can work on front end technologies and JavaScript frameworks, some like optimizations and problem-solving algorithms, backend would be a good option for them. So, it's perfectly fine if you scored 90 in the front end part and 50 in backend part, that just means you have a good chance as a front end developer. Remember web dev is more than this basic coding that you have done. We have various other technologies and application with which we can use our knowledge of web development.

So after all this, We are Sharing Google form for the selection process. We were planning hosting an interview process but in present scenario we found this method more suitable.

Waiting for your responses....

Thank you.
